This week I had a small interruption as I took some time to get a parts list together for Mr. Ford so that Forman could allow people to experiment with VR. To do this, I used pcpartpicker.com to create a list of components that would go into the computer. After that, I continued working on my environmental argument for veganism, which is getting pretty close to being done. The main limiting factor is the amount of papers I've been needing to read.