

Week 25

These past two weeks have been largely spent with presentations rather than work on any new projects. The big ingenuity exhibition happened in addition to parents weekend and I got to present my project during both of them. Although I feel that my project does not lend itself super well to the elevator pitch style of the ingenuity expo, I still think I was able to decently communicate what the project was about during both times. Hopefully with the time left in school I will be able to finish one more paper, but I'm not sure. I'm glad I was able to start this project this year in ingenuity, and I plan to continue working on it outside of the ingenuity project as I move on to college.

