

Week 9

This week I successfully published my essay on the moral argument for veganism, I had an extreme amount of fun writing it as it was my first time working with formal ethical logic. During this thanksgiving break, if I can manage to muster the time in between eating I plan to try and work more on one of the other essays that I have planned, whether it be about another aspect of veganism or another topic I have not yet talked about. This ingenuity project has been very interesting for me, and has given me the chance to express my ideas that would otherwise be stuck inside my mind, I hope that you, as the reader have been enjoying reading it as much as I have been enjoying writing it.

